

Landscaping

TBS TRACHTE
Building Systems

800-356-5824 • trachte.com • tbs@trachte.com

Today's self-storage facilities look better than ever - and a part of that curb appeal comes from good landscaping. We've assembled this collection of photos of our customers sites to help inspire your next project. As you think about your landscape plan, consider how it will age as well, and what level of maintenance will be needed. Using stone instead of wood mulch for example may cost more up front but will be easier to maintain in the future. Consider the mature size of tree and bushes, avoiding future crowding or leaves in clogging your building gutters.

Landscaping a facility adds to curb appeal - and is often required by municipalities.

Potted accent plants can soften the appearance of a storage facility where dirt is not available.

For more information and details on Trachte self-storage systems, please contact your regional manager at 800-356-5824.

The perimeter of this property is lined with a repetitive pattern of trees and bushes.

The landscape area at the end of this building is contained by a concrete curb. This helps to contain mulch or landscape rock, and also protects the planting from snowplows and traffic.

For more information and details on Trachte self-storage systems, please contact your regional manager at 800-356-5824.

800.356.5824

Even small, low cost planting areas can provide visual interest and curb appeal.

For more information and details on Trachte self-storage systems, please contact your regional manager at 800-356-5824.

For more information and details on Trachte self-storage systems, please contact your regional manager at 800-356-5824.

800.356.5824

Planting areas at end walls facing the street make a big impact.

Long walls of A-panel can be softened with trees and bushes.

For more information and details on Trachte self-storage systems, please contact your regional manager at 800-356-5824.

For more information and details on Trachte self-storage systems, please contact your regional manager at 800-356-5824.

800.356.5824

The city required this developer to shield the facility from view by planting trees around the perimeter of the property.

For more information and details on Trachte self-storage systems, please contact your regional manager at 800-356-5824.